

Breakfast Book Club: BBC

Who's BBC? BBC is for students in all grades. Students may attend any one or all meetings. BBC is sponsored by English teachers Liz Jaeger and Don Pults, and library media specialist, Jane Rolnick.

What's BBC? We meet before school for bagels and books to discuss popular novels and nonfiction books in a relaxed setting. The BBC is now in its sixth full year at Hill-Murray School.

When's BBC? We meet once each quarter, 6:30 a.m., and once during the summer. Watch and listen for announcements.

Where's BBC? Sign up in the Library Media Center to participate. We usually meet in the staff lounge, just off the main lobby.

Why BBC? BBC is designed to encourage reading as a lifetime leisure activity, provide a group experience to share insights about specific titles with others, and to help students build their own personal libraries. It's a fun way to meet students in all grades and share reactions to good books.

What's next? Our first selection for the 2010-11 school year is either Tuesdays with Morrie: an old man, a young man, and life's greatest lesson by Mitch Albom, Mr. Albom has a series of conversations on the meaning of life with his old professor. 192p. or Obasan by Joy Kogawa, Ms. Kogawa is Japanese Canadian and was interned and persecuted during World War II. This is her remembrance of that time. 296p. Choose one to read and discuss.
